Part I presents a historical and theoretical context of social work, including the relationship to other social services. Part II discusses social work practice with individuals and families, including the relationship between different approaches to social work. Part III explores social work practice with groups, and Part IV examines the role of social work in mental health, health care, the public schools, public welfare, child and family services, and social history. The last section, the workplace, and working with the media, reviews special concerns within social work, with work in relationship, and social work in social service. Part V covers professional development, including the career focus on preventive and future opportunities.
